STRONG REPUBLICAN ORGAN PROTESTS IN ADVANCE.

The "Bulldozered" Par-

The Absurd Plea of Intimidation Exposed.

From the Chicago Tribune [Rep.]

If we can get at the difficulty in Louisiana correctly, the dispute is chiefly over five parishes or counties, and whether the returns of these shall be counted at all, or, if counted, how they shall be counted.

It is alleged that these five parishes had a large registered vote, three fifths or two thirds of which was Republican; but that on election day the greater part of the colored Republicans, being intimidated by the White Liners, ran off and did not vote, while the Confederate remained and voted. The following figures will illustrate the situation, which gives the result of the vote in 1874 as well as in 1876. The 1874 vote was said to be full and fair for both sides.

VOTE IN 1874. 1876 1876 1,758 465 Feliciana 847 Feliciana 501 Baton Rouge 1,566 2,446 1,017 1,674 528 1,0714,324 8,185 4,417

At the election in 1874 these parishes gave a Republican majority for State. Treasurer of 3,861. They now give a Démocratic majority of 4,417, which ex-ceeds the Democratic vote cast in 1874. The Democrats admit that had the Republican vote been polled the Repub licans would have had a large majority. Now the controversy stands. On the one hand the Democrats insist on the vote being counted in exact accordance with the number of tickets cast; on the other hand, there are two propositions. 1. That the vote of these parishes be wholly dis-regarded and thrown out, on the grounds of intimidation, by the Canvassing Board 2. That the vote polled be counted, but that the Canvassing Board reckon also as polled the votes of those absenting themselves from fear of bodily harm. The average Northern voter has no procedaverage Northern voter has no procedent for such a condition of things as this. In the first place, deadly intimidation is not known at the North, and in the next place it will be difficult for a Northern man of any party to understand how 2,000 voters of one party in a county can be so successfully "intimidated" by 1,000 as to be a unable to approach the pollogical to the unable to th as to be unable to approach the polls, though the latter were protected, or supposed to be, by the United States Super-visors. It will be difficult to persuade the people of any Northern county that the minority, numbering 900 voters, could so intimidate the majority in East Feliciana, numbering eighteen hundred, that none of the latter dare show themselves at the polls. Nevertheless it is certain that the negroes did not vote for some reason. We assume that those who did vote were legal voters and know of no right recognized by any law of any state where the votes of legal voters, lawfully polled, can be rejected and they distranchised. We do not believe, therefore, that the moral sense of the American people will consent to or tolerate that the election of a president of the United States shall be determined and decided; by throwing out the votes of several thou sand legal votes, legally polled in any state of the Union. We take it, therefore that the votes actually polled in these five "bulldozed" parishes of Louisiana will be counted, no matter what may be the result produced upon the election by

If the facts be as stated, and we have tried to collate them fairly from thet sate ments of both sides, the Republicans of Louisiana and of the country have to bear the consequences of the panic which seems to have so stricken the colored voters in these five districts. We look upon it as a calamity, because we know of no legal remedy. There is no precedent known to any election law that we ever heard of where the votes of persons not voting, and not offering to vote, can be counted, no matter how strong may be the presumption that if such votes had beed polled they would have changed the result. In 1874, the Democrats elected at least fifty members to Congress in Republican districts because Republicans stayed away and did not vote. For the same reason the Democrats elected the governors of several States, and a majority of the Legislature in several states in 1874. No such thing as offsetting the vote actually polled by that not polled has ever been recognized at any election in any state in this country. Even in the desperate conflict in Louisiana four years ago both parties claimed the election, but both parties assumed the vote counted to have been polled. It is claimed by the Democrats that their party will have a majority of the whole vote of the state, over and above their vote in these parishes; but, while this ought to settle the matter, it my not do so, if the counting of the non polled vote be insisted upon by the other side. If, however, the Democrats do not have a majority except by counting the votes in these five parishes and the result in the state depend on their being counted or not counted, then the issue will be a direct one, and one upon which the country will promptly reach a judgement and no canvassing board will dare at-tempt to put the judgement of the nation at defence; and the American people will never engage in a civil war to uphold the counting of votes never cast or offered to be cast, or reject lawful votes legally cast and recorded on the poll lists.

SAMUEL J. TILDEN is elected President of the United States, both by the people and the forms of law. The great tribunal to declare the result is Congress. On this subject the N. Y. Express of the 16th

"The Express means what it said—that the House is as much judge of election as the Senate; that the Vice President can only open packages addressed to him, can only open packages addressed to him, and that according to right, precedent and custom. Tellers are five to three, and are persons to count the votes, and see that they are correct. The Express means that the men who have received a majority of the Electoral votes, with, as in the present year, three hundred thousand majority of the people's vote, have a right to preside over our Government for four years, as declared in the Constitution of the United States, and assanctioned by the government and people from 1789 to 1876."

In 1872 President Grant permitted me to leave the government service—very unjustly too. I think, "under a cloud."— By a scratch of his pen it could have been avoided, all of which I have never as yet recovered from. I am inclined to think, however, that he also will leave the service under a cloud, for which I regret to see. How General Grant can hold to a man like John A. Logan, whom I heard call him (Grant) everything but a man and a gentleman in a public speech at Mattoon, Ill., in 1872, is one of the things a fellow can't find out. Logan told me on the pavement of the Patent office, Washington, where I spoke to him about a note for reinstallment, that Grant was a d—d drunken loafer, that he (Logan) "had never asked a favor from Grant in his life, and he never would;" that he never "considered Grant perfectly fit for the place as President." How, I say, Grant can overlook such a man and his abuse, is more than I can devise
